

COURT SCENE IN DIGGS WHITE SLAVE TRIAL

AFTER BEING CONTINUALLY CHASED, SNAPPED AND PESTERED BY PHOTOGRAPHERS, DIGGS AND HIS ATTORNEYS CONSENT TO POSE IN COURT FOR THIS NEWSPAPER.

This is the first posed picture of the Diggs-Caminetti case. It was taken during the trial of Maury I. Diggs, white slave defendant, and shows both defendants and the attorneys defending them. From left to right—Maury I. Diggs, Luke Howe, personal attorney for F. Drew Caminetti, son of the commissioner of immigration who is next then former U. S. Dist. Atty. Robt. T. Devlin, chief counsel for the defense, and Nate Coghlan, who passed the jurors in the case.

THE RED BUTTON

A MYSTERY STORY OF NEW YORK

"To the police," it read. "Any matter that concerns the bearer, Mrs. Rosalie Le Grange, is to be referred to me. I request you to give her the greatest discretion."

"Inspector Martin McGee," "Not a word," pursued Rosalie Le Grange. "Now mind I didn't see this thing, an' I don't know as much about it as you. But it's your job to tip me off to the reserves as soon as they come—make them understand that they ain't to stop me whatever I do. And remember—now the woman smiled in a meaning way—"You got here just as quick as you could—got a second later—I'll stick to that. Now get inside." She waited a moment, before she followed him.

Tommy North, fairly green now, was sitting on a couch in his ghostly raiment. At that moment, Senator Estrilla came down the stairs from his sister's room. He had opened his raincoat, but it was still wet. He had turned up his hat brim, but an occasional drop fell.

"My seester is better," he said. "Oh, can I assist?" And while he helped the men to cover the body, he listened to scattered explanations from the women.

Now the reserves had come; and after them, the coroner and the detectives. They cleared out the house, holding only those who seemed to them pertinent witnesses. At a signal from Rosalie Le Grange they detained her for a time, on the ground that she had arrived so suspiciously early. The first unorganized search for the criminal simmered down to Tommy North, although even Mrs. Moore admitted that he had entered only a minute before the body was discovered. In the midst of the investigation, a new quandary presented itself. The house was to be sealed while the police investigated. The innocent would have to find some other dwelling place. That suited her, Miss Harding remarked; she wouldn't sleep there again; whereupon Mrs. Moore, declaring she was ruined, fell again to weeping. And suddenly she who called herself Madame Le Grange stepped forward into the huddled distressed group.

"I haven't introduced myself," she said, with easy masterful calm, "but I've just opened the house at 442 as a boarding house. You ain't going to hold me, of course"—this to the police—"and anyhow, you know where to find me in case you want me. There's room tonight in my house for you all." She turned, with her eternal air of mistress in any situation, to Miss Harding. "Come, dress and pack up your night things, my dear. We can move your trunk tomorrow." Mechanically, Miss Harding obeyed, and then Miss Jones. Suddenly Mr. Estrilla, who had been ministering to Mrs. Moore by the door, spoke up and asked:

"My seester, too?" "She's sick, ain't she?" inquired Mrs. Le Grange, as if for an instant that gave her pause. Then the poor thing needed it worst of all; she answered her own argument. "Come on!" She dashed away, lightly in spite of her bulk, Estrilla following.

While Rosalie Le Grange was preparing to move the invalid on to the top floor, the police and the coroner straightened out affairs a little. There was much man in Tommy North. If he had played the craven in the first rush of his gruesome discovery, it was because he had awakened to that state of tense depression which comes with the sudden departure of drunkenness. He became defiant now; whereupon the police began to bully. While they were trying to make Mrs. Moore admit that she had not seen Tommy North come up the stairs, a detective sergeant put a sneering question to her:

"Well, who else could have done it? Who else has been here?"

And the inrush of memory brought a little shriek from Mrs. Moore.

"Mr. Wade—the gentleman who called tonight!" she cried. All at once her suspicions left the branded Mr. North. Mr. Wade had come late in the evening—and that, in the doctor's opinion, was just about the time when Capt. Hanks must have died. Mr. Wade had called two or three times before, always at night. Trembling, she found his card, "Lawrence Wade, Curfew Club," in the plated tray at the hall door. Suddenly Miss Harding, who had been refusing all light on the events of the evening, gave a little shriek.

RESINAL CURED ITCHING ECZEMA

Years of Suffering—Immediate Relief.
Cleveland, O., June 2, 1912.—"About eight years ago my hands would get very red—then little blisters would come with pus in them. They would itch and burn so that I would not sleep at all. I used everything; people told me about, and all kinds of blood treatments, but they did me no good. I wore out dozens of pairs of rubber gloves using them when working in water, and still the eczema stayed. About three years ago I read about Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and at once bought some at the drug store. They gave me immediate relief, and after using two jars of Resinol Soap, I can honestly say that my hands are cured. It has been three years already since I am cured, and the eczema has not returned. I really can't say enough about Resinol." (Signed) Mrs. Chas. P. Winchester, 3224 Carroll Ave.

Better proof, even than such a letter, is to try Resinol yourself and see how quickly the trouble disappears. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by all druggists. Free trial; Dept. T-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.—Advertisement.
